Cotton in Excess of Contract Figure Will Be Destroyed

Over-Planting Here Ranges From Fraction Acre to 24 Acres

VIOLATES CONTRACT

Committeemen Were to Wind Up Work Here This Week

Cotton that has been planted in excess of that allowed by the government under contracts executed between government and grower early in the spring of this year, will have to be plowed up, or otherwise destroyed, according to Frank J. Hill, assistant to County Agent Frank R. Stanley, in charge of the present measuring program now in progress in Hempstead county.

The government is renting certain lands and paying a consideration therefor and the contract the growers entered into specifies that such land will not be planted in cotton. Under the terms of these contracts, definite acreages were allotted to each grower and in the event he has exceeded such figure he will have to get the excess cotton out of existence, Mr. Hill says.

There are a number of contracts where an accurate measurement shows that the growers have a small amount of excess cotton and they are a few where the extra planting is considerable.

Committeemen who did not finish their measurements last week have been advised by the county agent's office that they must complete all measurements not later than Saturday of this week.

12-Cent Loan Plan for Pool Members

Johnston Announces Choice Open to Participating Cotton Farmers

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Oscar Johnston, manager of the 1933 cotton producers pool, announced pool members holding participation trust certificates will be given an opportunity to benefit by the new 12-cent loan plan or may surrender their certificates to the pool and receive a market price.

If all pool members received the 12-cent loan, Johnston said, approximately $14,820,000 will be distributed among this group.

It was announced also that an arrangement had been made whereby the Federal Relief Administration will purchase cotton for relief purposes.

Members of the producers pool are farmers who took options on government owned cotton, formerly held by the old Farm Board. Approximately 1,950,000 bales are held in the pool by some 450,000 farmers.

Explains Plan

Johnston believes that a majority of members will take advantage of the offer to advance them an additional two cents and will continue to carry their pool certificates.

"Pool members now owe to the pool against cotton as evidenced by their certificates, 10 cents per pound or more."

Schall Reiterates Press Censorship Charges in Letter

National Press Service Would Replace Wires of Private Companies

ROOSEVELT DENIES IT

Says Government Has No Intentions as Outlined by Blind Senator

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Senator Schall (R-Minn.) sent an open letter to President Roosevelt Saturday reiterating that the administration intends to "force censorship of the press."

The letter followed the president's demand for facts on which the senator based his recent assertion that plans were under consideration for "a national press service to take the place of the Associated Press, Hearst, News Services and the United Press."

Denied by Roosevelt

WASHINGTON—(AP)—A direct denial was given by President Roosevelt to an assertion by Senator Schall, Republican, Minnesota, that the "brain trust" was drafting a proposal for creation of a government press service that would supplant existing private wire services.

In a telegram to the senator, the president asked him for the basis of such an assertion in order that the White House could "make impossible the things you say will be done."

Schall read the telegram to newspapermen by telephone from his home in Berwyn, Md. The Minnesota senator said he would prepare a reply over the week-end in which he will say his information was based, among other things, "on the fact that every bill passed by the Roosevelt Congress has had a little censorship in it; the first session alone taking away 77 powers from the judiciary and legislative branches."

Schall's charges were made in a radio talk Friday night. Mr. Roosevelt told newspapermen today that the government had no such intentions as outlined by the blind Minnesota senator.

Text of Telegram.

He telegraphed Schall as follows: "In the statement read for you Friday night over the radio it was said that 'a national press service to take the place of the Associated Press, the Hearst News Services and United Press, and which would have exclusive use of all government news and be in a position to give its service only to those newspapers loyal to the Roosevelt dictatorship' is under consideration."

"A further statement was made that 'the Roosevelt administration is so determined on press censorship it may be interesting to the public to know how this un-American idea gets so much consideration.'"

"But for the fact that this statement was made for you, I would have let it pass unnoticed. Since I should assume that the statements were not made without basis in fact, I request that you give me the benefit of such facts as you have in support of the charges you caused to be made."

"Once these facts are in my hands they will receive immediate attention in order to make impossible the things you say will be done, because I am just as much opposed to them as you are."

"You will be rendering a real service if you promptly let me have the facts on which you based the charges made."

New Development in Alabama Case

Harold Taylor Charged With Another Assault Attempt

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. —(AP)—The co-ed murder mystery, baffling as any detective thriller, took a new turn as Harold Taylor, accused of the slaying, was charged with an attempt to ravish another woman.

Mrs. Clara Cost, in a warrant sworn to in county court, charged Taylor picked her up upon the streets Monday afternoon, drove her out the lonely Green Springs road, and attempted an attack.

She jumped from his automobile, she said, and made her way back to her home.

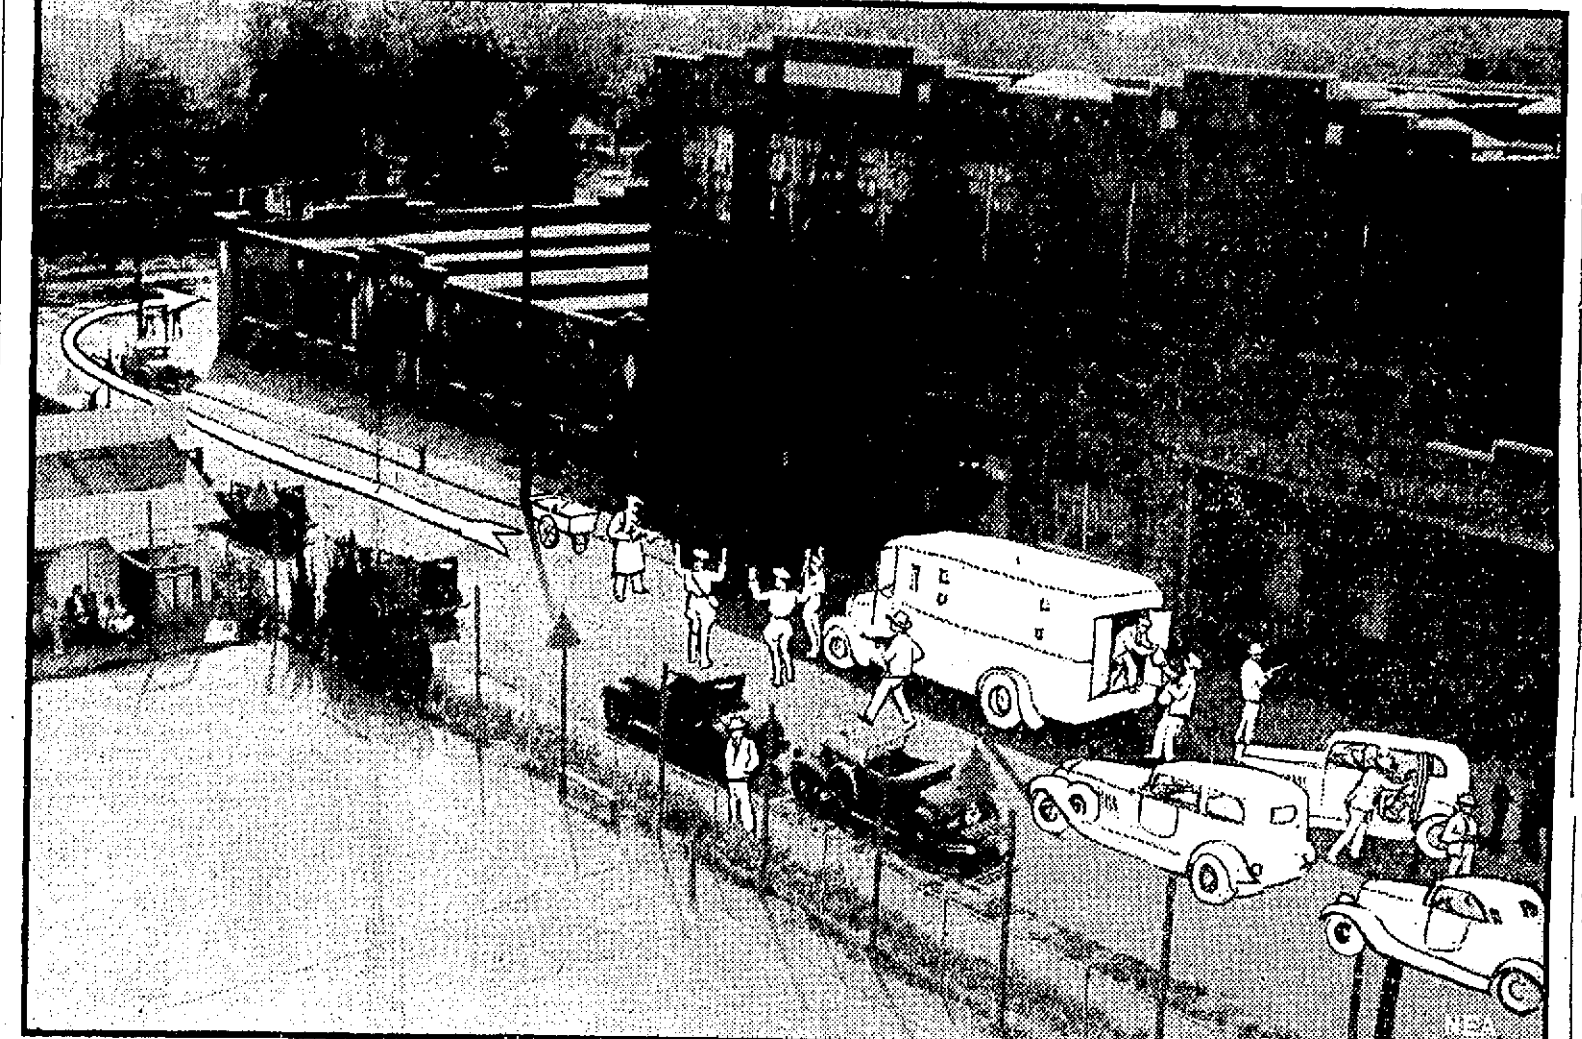

This development came two hours after Judge Russell McElroy had ordered the grand jury assembled in special session Monday to investigate the death of Faye New, 19-year-old Howard college student slain after he went with Taylor on an automobile ride late Monday.

Mrs. Cost said she jumped from Taylor's automobile at 4:30 p. m. Monday, six hours before he met Miss New and asked her to accompany him.

Questioned by newspapermen Taylor again denied his guilt with the statement, "I have nothing to confess."

If an indictment is returned by the grand jury, the accused persons will probably face trial here September 17, the first day of capital case week on the circuit court docket.

How Biggest Cash Robbery Was Staged

Gruesome Murder Uncovered in N. Y.

Body of an Unidentified Man Found in Trunk

NEW YORK.—(AP)—The body of a man found in a trunk Saturday in the rear of a General Motors Studebaker car was later identified through fingerprints as that of Bernard McMahon, 41, an ex-convict.

Police said that McMahon also was known as Dalton and Murray. Records on file showed that he had been arrested in six times since 1914.

Hunt for Bandits Spreads to East

Clues in $427,000 Robbery of Armored Car Are Without Results

NEW YORK.—(AP)—The gigantic man-hunt for the gang of bandits who escaped with $427,000 from an armored truck spread over the East Saturday as clue after clue ran into dead ends.

Arrest in Philadelphia of three suspects gave police momentary hope of developments in the solution of the nation's greatest cash hold up, but after a few hours of questioning the Philadelphia authorities announced they were convinced the men were not involved.

The three men, Arthur Lee Phillips, identified as the husband of Clara Phillips, California hammer slayer, Lee Georgia and John Hardy, both of Brooklyn, were held for further questioning. Police said they were suspected in other crimes.

Accused by Woman

A short time after the Philadelphia arrest, a Brooklyn woman told police she thought Phillips was a man who rented an apartment from her a year ago and had frequent contact with gangsters.

Indignant that Phillips gave the apartment house address, in a substantial section of Brooklyn, where the hold up occurred, as his own, she told the circumstances surrounding rental of the apartment.

She said she rented it to a Mr. and Mrs. Harry Palmer, who remained in it two or three weeks. During that time she said it was often called on the "Palmer" frequently, arriving one or two at a time in expensive automobiles.

The woman said that on one occasion a man telephoned. When informed the Palmers were not in their apartment, he said:

"This is Wuxey Gordon, tell him to call me."

Gordon, beer baron, is now serving a long sentence in the Atlanta federal penitentiary for income tax evasion.

Long May Call Out Legislature Again

Hints in Personal Paper He Considers Action Against Judges

BATON ROUGE, La. —(AP)—Through personal political publication, The American Progress, Senator Huey P. Long Friday threatened another quick look at his controlled legislature to take action against his political enemies.

Lauding work of last week's special session, which took 77 hours to put through 26 bills placing broad military authority and control of elections into the hands of Dictator Long, The Progress quoted Long followers in the Assembly as saying they were ready "to come back any minute."

Said Long's newspaper: "While the legislators departed for their homes satisfied that they had completed the work needed to raise the state and the city of New Orleans from the control of the thugs and vice lords, many were heard to say: 'If we haven't done enough, we can come right back any minute to do anything else necessary.'"

The Progress hinted broadly that such a session might be for the purpose of starting impeachment proceedings against certain New Orleans judges whom Long repeatedly has attacked in public utterances.

An accompanying cartoon depicted "Father Louisiana," standing against a background marked "legislative session," delivering the boot to Mayor T. Semmes, Wainwright of New Orleans, certain Orleans judges, and others, and exclaiming: "This is just the beginning—I'll come again."

Cotton Textile Walkout Is Set for September 1

Would Involve More Than 600,000 Mill Employees

OFFICIALS TO MEET

Aluminum Workers Accept Invitation for Peace

By Associated Press

Strike leaders spread along the Atlantic seaboard Saturday to issue instructions for an approaching cotton textile walkout, while in Washington the supreme court of labor disputes sought to preserve peace.

Representatives of the United Textile workers of America met Saturday in four states to receive orders. They say the strike will involve 600,000 employees.

Officials of the Kohler plumbing company of Kohler, Wis., denied the charges of training a private army.

Strike clashes Saturday in Milwaukee kept police on the jump.

In the meantime the National Council of aluminum workers accepted an invitation to meet labor department officials in an effort to end their strike.

Refuse Mediation

(By the Associated Press)

The menace of a strike of 750,000 textile workers reared a critical stage Friday night, the Strike Committee having rejected flatly the good offices of the Cotton Textile National Industrial Relations Board as intermediary.

Adhering to its plan for a general walkout September 1, the committee said it had no confidence in the board's ability to adjust the issues fairly.

As a means to end the protracted strike at the Kohler Company in Kohler, Wisconsin, the Labor Relations Board at Washington announced an election would be ordered soon to determine the will of the employees. Union representation was a prime issue.

Appeal to President

Strike leaders telegraphed an appeal to President Roosevelt charging that the Kohler company "is drilling a private army of about 600 men who are fully equipped with rifles, steel helmets and machine guns." They said they feared repetition of the bloodshed of July 27.

The aluminum strike pursued an uneventful course, awaiting the next move of the government. Representatives of the aluminum strikers have appealed to the president, the governor and the secretary of labor to speed a settlement.

Fifty beer truck drivers walked out at Gary, Ind., but returned to work a few hours later. Wage and hour demands of the strikers were met.

Truck drivers struck at two Swift & Company plants and that of the St. Louis Independent Packing Co., at Pittsburgh, threatening down meat deliveries. Pickets and police stood by.

Dynamite dug a hole in the lawn of the general superintendent of the Republic Steel Corporation plant at Birmingham, Ala., and police, forewarned, trapped a farmer employee. Another got away. Non-union labor has been operating the plant since the strike began.

A notice of an employees' election next Tuesday was posted at the offices of 166 Minneapolis companies involved in the recent strike of truck drivers.

Wholesale Food Prices Highest Since Aug. 1931

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—The highest level of wholesale food prices since August, 1931, was reported Friday by the Labor Department for the week ended August 18. For the same amount of food the retailer had to pay $1 for in 1932, he had to pay 71 cents last week.

The department's index for the week was 25 per cent above that for the previous week and 15 per cent above that for the corresponding week last year.

Wholesale commodity prices in general rose to 76.1 per cent of the 1926 average, an increase of 0.9 per cent over the previous week.

The farm products group also reached a new high for the year. The index for the week was 68.9 compared with 57.5 a year ago and 49.3 two years ago.

Police Quell Rioting Pennsylvania Convicts

COLLEGEVILLE, Pa. —(AP)—State police and guards Saturday crushed an outbreak at the eastern Pennsylvania penitentiary at Graterford after more than 200 convicts had rioted for more than three hours.

The rioting prisoners started fires in the cell blocks and outbuildings, destroying a barn and damaging several shacks.

No one was seriously injured and none escaped.

Name Delegates to Kiwanis Meet

Bundy, Williams, Gibson Will Represent Hope Organization

Election of delegates to the Missouri-Kansas-Arkansas Kiwanis convention to be held at Excelsior Springs, Mo., was held at the Friday night meeting of the Hope Kiwanis club.

Those elected were Sid Bundy and Oliver Williams. They will be accompanied by Charles Dana Gibson, club president, who is automatically a delegate by reason of his office. Alternates are Wayne H. England and the Rev. G. F. X. Strassner.

The convention is to be a four-day event beginning October 7.

W. S. Atkins gave a brief accounting of the Hope Kiwanis activities over the past five years, stating that the chief objective had been rural relations. He recalled that during this time no small amount of time and money has been spent in establishing these pleasant relations.

Mr. Gibson took cognizance of what is said to be a promiscuous rumor that the Hope Kiwanis club is said to be a political organization. He voiced the past activities and purposes of the organization, pointing out that the specific rules governing Kiwanis International prohibits the club from entering into politics as a unit.

A. M. Westmoreland of the Hempstead County Lumber Company, renewed his membership with the club. Comer Boyett was a guest. The meeting was opened with a song, followed in invocation by John P. Cox.

Private Funeral for Van Meter

Sucker for a Skirt Rides Home in Wooden Box

FORT WAYNE, Ind. —(AP)—Another Dillinger gangster is coming home—in a wooden box.

A Fort Wayne undertaker went to St. Paul to claim the body of Homer Van Meter, smooth talking helper of the late John Dillinger and bring it back here for burial. Van Meter was slain there Thursday night by St. Paul police.

The body will be brought to the home of the mobster's brother, Henry Van Meter, where private funeral services will be held. Burial will be in the Lindenwood cemetery.

The date for the funeral has not been set, but it probably will be Sunday.

Thus, Van Meter will be lowered into his grave just a month after his chief, Dillinger, was buried in Indianapolis. Dillinger was slain by federal officers in East Chicago, Ind., on July 22 and was buried on July 23.

With the death of Van Meter, the notorious band of Dillinger outlaws, as originally formed, has been accounted for except for one man—John Hamilton. Other desperadoes, including George (Baby Face) Nelson, joined the gang at various times but all the original group have been killed or captured, except for Hamilton.

Will Bomb Sky in Effort to Get Rain

WAXAHATCHIE, Texas —(AP)—James A. Boze, rainmaker, armed with a permit from the United States Bureau of Air Commerce Saturday was to attempt to bomb moisture out of the clouds over Ellis county.

D. A. Rowe, chief inspector of the Dallas office of the Commerce Bureau gave permission after Boze and his pilot, Winifred Bottenfield, produced waivers from Ellis county farmers owning 27,000 acres of land over which the experiment will be conducted. A previous flight was refused by the government.

Six hundred bombs of 10 pounds each will be dropped from an altitude of 15,000 feet in an effort to induce precipitation.

Four-Cornered Race for Speakership of National Congress

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Representative Joseph W. Byrns of Tennessee, Democratic floor leader, stepped into the race for the speakership, creating a four-cornered battle for that most powerful of House posts.

Announcement of the veteran legislator's decision to seek the office was made here and at the Tennessee home almost simultaneously. Within were prediction by his backers that he would be chosen to succeed the late Speaker Henry T. Rainey of Illinois.

Byrns' candidacy placed him in a race with Representative Sam Rayburn of Texas, William B. Bankhead of Alabama and John Rankin of Mississippi. Reports received here indicated that Byrns had written many magazine articles on Germany and the Hitler movement.

Old Ideas Discarded in Rheumatism Study

One striking example of the progress of scientific control of diseases is given in present-day treatment of "rheumatism"—a word so often misused and abused by those without clear understanding of its problems.

At first this condition was believed due to a dangerous fluid, or "rheum," flowing from the brain to various parts of the body and stirring up all sorts of aches, pains, and other disturbances.

Now hear in mind that no one ever had actually seen this "rheum," or proved its presence. It was just an idea.

Then more practical and scientific physicians decided to focus their attention not on the brain, but on the joints and muscles in which the pains actually occur. At once they had some difficulty in distinguishing between the kind of pains that were called rheumatism and those associated with another rather common disorder called gout.

It is quite clear that doctors of an earlier day were not able to distinguish very definitely between these two diseases. More recently it has come to be believed that gout is primarily a disorder of the metabolism associated with heavy eating and the use of liquors, whereas no one is quite certain as to just what causes many of the forms of rheumatism.

Indeed, there is still some possibility that gout may be just one form of a variety of conditions called rheumatism.

As study of these conditions continued, physicians began to realize that there were cases of rheumatism which might affect the heart and also others which might affect the nervous system, so that today it is believed that cholera, or St. Vitus' dance, is a form of rheumatism disorder.

It is known, furthermore, that the condition called rheumatic fever is primarily a condition affecting the heart and producing definite changes in that organ, leading in many cases to serious crippling of the heart and to death.

With establishment of the conception of germ causation of disease, numerous investigators have endeavored to find a specific germ.

It now seems reasonable to believe that there are some forms of rheumatic disorder in which the germs are seriously involved.

Today, when confronted with a case of rheumatic disease, the physician must make a thorough study of his patient from all these points of view.

He studies the digestion and the metabolism; he looks for foci of infection in the throat and in the teeth, as well as elsewhere in the body; he uses vaccines with a view to raising the resistance to the germs involved; he controls the diet and by means of massage, heat, orthopedic appliances, and similar methods, he endeavors to rest the tissues involved and later to stimulate them to recovery.

As we look back to the time when rheumatism was thought to be due to some weird poison that flowed out of the brain into the joints, we see how great the progress of scientific control has actually been.

YOUR CHILDREN

Nagging Mother Spoils All Fun, Wearing Out Welcome and Self

"Well—well, if here isn't Mrs. Grant and the children. Come, Sophia, here's Margy and Porter come to play with you. Hello, hello there. Come right in. You needn't look the car. We'll sit out here under the tree where it's cool."

"Oh, dear!" sighed Mrs. Grant, as she kissed her friend. "It's so hot in town I thought I couldn't get the children dressed. Myself either."

"I must say you all look lovely. Sophia, take Mrs. Grant's things inside. Here, take this chair, Blanche. Now, children, you can go and play."

Mrs. Grant was busy hauling Margy away from rosebush. "I don't want her dress to tear. It's so fine—her best one. Her grandma made it."

"More fussing. Porter" she was off after the boy. "Keep away from that wheel. It's dangerous. Now, just look at your hands. I'll have to take him up and wash his hands."

"Oh, don't bother. Here—take my handkerchief. He'll soon be dirty again."

But Mrs. Grant had hauled Porter inside.

"Sophia, take Margy to see the nice new saw Daddy made you," said Cora.

"Where did Margy go?" Mrs. Grant wanted to know as she reproached her newly scrubbed boy. "Oh—a saw-saw. I'll have a look at it. She isn't used to rough—I mean big toys."

"Oh, they're all right," Cora assured her. "Do sit down and rest yourself. I'm knitting a dress." She opened a bag and pulled out some blue yarn.

"It's going to be like that one we saw in—"

But again she spoke to space.

Mrs. Grant had gone around back to investigate. In a minute she returned with Margy. "I thought they might play around here," she said. "Oh, yes, the saw-saw's fine, but once I knew a child who got her foot under her one. You never can tell."

At last Mrs. Grant was gone once more. "Yes, that's a perfectly lovely tricycle. But don't get on. Let Sophia ride. Wait a minute. Cora, I'll be right back. I'm going to the basement. Forty might fall down. There. Now we can talk. What's that, Porter? Water? All right, Sophia, you get it, but bring it to me first. I have to test it. He can't have it too cold. Margy, come here. That cork keeps getting in your eye."

When, an hour later, the car door slammed, Cora murmured, "A nice cool day in the suburbs. That woman couldn't be cool in Greenland. I'm as tired as if I'd dragged a fire-hose ten miles. Sophia, go and jump in the tub and put on another jumper. I want to knit another row to settle my nerves."

Reading this, you begin to understand why both Miss Mayo and Mr. Gandhi can be so convincing. All that each of them says, the Charles imply in truth. The rights and wrongs, the virtues and the evils, are piled mountain-high on each side.

There is no use trying to strike a balance. The one certainty, as these writers see it, is that British power over India is evaporating.

In the long history of the race this may be a good thing or it may be a great catastrophe; but it is happening, and both parties can only make the best of it.

Boots swallowed hard. Denis Fenway, in old gray flannels with a blackthorn stick in his hand, stood gazing at her, frankly embarrassed, frankly at a loss.

Boots was the more composed. She crumpled the damp handkerchief in her hand and smiled wanly at him.

"Don't pay any attention to me," she said quickly and lightly. "I've got the early morning blues. One of my Irish ancestors is stalking me today. We all like a good cry, you know."

Surprisingly, the young man sat down beside her, stretching his long legs out on the cobbled path, stared and spangled with globules of dew.

"Cry away," he said briefly. "I have a good shoulder."

Boots put her handkerchief resolutely away in the pocket of her white woolly sweater and smiled again.

"Oh, the shower's over," she told him. "It was nothing."

If this handsome, indolent young man thought she was going to tell him her troubles he was vastly mistaken. Probably he would try to use her for—what did writers call it?—copy. He was going to be disappointed if that was his aim.

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

By Alicia Hart

Right and Wrong Way to Use Nourishing Creams

While blondes and fair skinned, brown-haired girls are weeping about various ways to get rid of sunburn, dark-complexioned women who do not tan or burn have their own post-vention beauty problems, too. For even though their skins may be quite white and clear, the chances are ten to one that they're bothered with excessive dryness.

Obviously, bleaching lotions are not going to help. Dry skins need preparations which tend to replace natural oils that have been dried out by the sun. If your complexion comes in this category, get a jar of nourishing cream. And learn to use it properly.

At bedtime—after your skin has been thoroughly cleaned and patted with skin tonic—dip two cotton pads in ice water. Wring out all the water and then put tissue cream on the pads.

Follow Facial Muscles
Beginning at the base of the throat, smooth the cream upward and outward to the hairline. Try to follow the facial muscles. They certainly do not run in a straight line from nose to ears—yet many women go on applying cream in that all-wrong direction. Then take a patter (if you don't own one, use fingertips) and, again using upward and outward strokes, pat the cream into your skin. Keep on patting until the cream is entirely melted and the skin feels warm and tingling. When you've finished, wipe off the excess, leaving a little cream around eyes and mouth, and go to bed.

Repeat the treatment in the morning. However, before putting on foundation lotion and other makeup, use skin tonic to remove every bit of the cream.

Why Columbia County is Supporting Capt. Wade Kitchens as a Candidate for CONGRESS

(An Editorial, Voluntary, Unsolicited)
From the Banner-News, Magnolia, Ark., Aug. 9, 1934

There are several reasons why Columbia, (the home county of Captain Wade Kitchens) is supporting him for Congressman from the Seventh Congressional District, almost solidly.

First, he deserves this support, because he is qualified to fill the office efficiently and with credit to himself, to his county and district, and because he is ambitious for this high position of greater service to his country.

Second, because he is mature in years—not too old nor too young. He has prepared himself by close application to his studies in public schools of South Arkansas, the State University and one of the best law schools of the country, and has supplemented this preparation with a broad experience in many avenues of life in its stern realities.

Third, he has made his way by hard work, exercise of economy, energy and ambition. He is sober, honest, energetic, dependable and reflects honor upon his aged parents, now residents of Waldo, who have a family of twelve children, everyone of whom has developed into an ideal citizen.

Fourth, his platform is sane, conservative, sound and progressive.

The several classes of people endorse him for the above reasons in general and each in a particular sense.

The farmers of Columbia county are supporters of Capt. Kitchens because he was born and reared on the farm, was a farmer in boyhood, and is still farming through tenants on his land holdings. He understands their needs as no one can who has not been one among them.

The teachers are supporting him because he has taught school and has a sympathetic understanding of the duties and responsibilities of this profession. He is their friend.

Business and other professional circles at home are his staunch friends because he is one of them and has a knowledge of their problems through cooperation with them.

The soldier boys, old and young, are his zealous supporters because he served in three international conflicts, having been captain of Company "K" as a volunteer in the World War. He knows by experience the risks and the ordeals, the duties and the dangers facing a man who places himself as a wall of defense between his countrymen and the guns of the enemy, a sacrificial service, of which there is none more eminent, nor one that merits gratitude and recognition in so great a degree.

All these contacts have given Capt. Kitchens, the soldier candidate, a broad vision and understanding of national and international relations which, added to a close study of finance, national and international, has admirably fitted him to deal intelligently with the intricate problems of the nation, none of which is more important than its finances at this perilous time.

If elected, he will go prepared to serve without losing time to "catch on," and reports from every part of the district indicate that he will be nominated.

In supporting Captain Kitchens, Columbia county is proving that the saying, "A prophet is not without honor save in his own country," does not apply to his home people, and they are taking this opportunity to show their appreciation for one who has lived among them honorably, with his excellent family, has paid taxes into their treasury, aided home institutions, and now stands ready to give his country and district able conscientious, honest, constructive service in Congress, where new material added every few years may prevent monopolies in government and best carry out the principles of Jeffersonian Democracy, the type advocated by the founders of this free republic.

Shows British Rule in India Declining—This Book Tells How Nation Drifts Toward Freedom

By BRUCE CATTION

"Indian Patchwork," by Edward and Mary Charles, is a nervous and irritable little book which helps one, about as well as any book available, to understand just how and why India is slipping out from under British rule.

Edward Charles was principal of a native college in India; Mary is his wife, and this book is made up of extracts from the diaries they kept during his term of office.

On the surface, it is little more than a record of troublesome incidents—some of them merely annoying, and some of them, like the time someone hid a cobra in Mr. Charles' lavatory, grimly menacing. But all the confused currents of Anglo-Indian relations seem to be illuminated by them.

The young Indian students seem to be a vague and ineffectual lot—proud, rather silly, utterly incapable of providing their nation with leadership, reflecting the weaknesses of the character land rather than its strengths. But the English themselves come off little better. They cannot adapt themselves to changing times; they can only fight for the good old days and look fondly ahead to their retirement pensions.

Reading this, you begin to understand why both Miss Mayo and Mr. Gandhi can be so convincing. All that each of them says, the Charles imply in truth. The rights and wrongs, the virtues and the evils, are piled mountain-high on each side.

There is no use trying to strike a balance. The one certainty, as these writers see it, is that British power over India is evaporating.

In the long history of the race this may be a good thing or it may be a great catastrophe; but it is happening, and both parties can only make the best of it.
